The personal effects of George de Mohrenschildt were turned over Friday in Dallas to two investigators for the House Assassinations Committee.

Included was a picture of Lee Harvey Oswald taken with the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle later used to kill President Kennedy. Underneath it, inscribed in Russian, are the words "Hunter for the Fascist, ha ha ha."

The effects had been in the possession of de Mohrenschildt's lawyer, Pat S. Russell.

Also of prime interest is a manuscript nearly 300 pages in length, entitled "I'm a Patsy, I'm a Patsy" — with the theme that Oswald was a patsy in the murder of Kennedy. Russell would not comment on what is in the manuscript, but said de Mohrenschildt had finished it about a year and a half ago.

Also turned over were tape recordings, photographs, newspaper clippings and pictures of a personal nature.

It was learned that the investigators, who identified themselves Friday night as Jonathan Blackmer and John J. Moriarity Jr., were en route to Palm Beach to pick up de Mohrenschildt's possessions there, but quickly changed their minds and rushed to Dallas when they learned of the manuscript.

A briefcase with some notes and writings, used airline tickets and other personal effects was given to Palm County Sheriff's investigators by de Mohrenschildt's daughter, Alexandra, Tuesday afternoon.

Meanwhile, plans for the cremation of de Mohrenschildt were under way in Palm Beach. An attorney for Alexandra said he could not comment on when the cremation would occur, but said "the plans to cremate him have nothing whatsoever to do with all the allegations being made, but is just a family decision."

Palm Beach County officials asked the lawyer to hold up the cremation until at least Saturday, it was learned.

Russell said de Mohrenschildt's widow, Jeanne LeGon de Mohrenschildt, who arrived here Thursday night, would not attend the rites in Florida.

Russell said the estate would probably be filed for probate Monday. He said de Mohrenschildt's estate was "minimal."
